Under the Workforce Innovation and Opportunities Act, also known as WIOA, people with disabilities now have greater services and supports in finding work.

Your disability should not keep you from working in your community. The Vocational Rehabilitation program helps people with disabilities prepare for and keep a job.

Vocational Rehabilitation

Vocational Rehabilitation, also known as VR, is a program that helps people with disabilities prepare for and keep a job. The goal of VR is to help you be able to do it yourself. VR will provide you with services that include job counseling and information. They can also refer you to other people who may be able to help you find a job.

(34 CFR 397.40)

Once you qualify for services from VR, you will work with your VR counselor to create an employment plan. This plan is based on your strengths, resources, priorities, concerns, abilities, capabilities, interests, and informed choice.

(34 CFR 361.1)

Working in the Community

The Disability Law Center is excited to see people with disabilities having more services and opportunities to work in their communities.

One purpose of the WIOA is to increase economic independence for all by providing opportunities for those hired below the minimum wage. Under the WIOA, VR will review and re-evaluate people with disabilities who are employed and receiving below the minimum wage to see if alternative work options may be a better fit for them. This review will continue to happen every year that a person with a disability works for less than minimum wage.
