Executive Summary

This report details information found when the Disability Law Center (DLC) examined the communication practices of Utah's 29 county election offices leading up to the March 3, 2020 Presidential Primary.

Utah counties are communicating with voters in a variety of ways but, not always completely or accurately. With a few strategic tweaks and consistent effort, Utah can become a national leader in providing its voters accurate, accessible information about voting options, so all citizens can exercise their right to vote privately and independently.

We believe this report is particularly timely as the unanimous passage of H.B. 3006 requires counties to inform voters about accessible options via websites, public notices and mailed ballots. We hope Election Officials across Utah will use it to guide improvements.

County elections websites are an underutilized, accessible pathway to share information with the public. As shown in Table 1, even though each county website was found to be accessible, the DLC found only 17 out of 29 county websites had accurate information about upcoming election dates, with 14 mentioning accurate early voting options or vote center locations. Six websites mentioned available disability accommodations, with four detailing how to request one. None of the websites inform voters who cannot read or mark a paper ballot that voting equipment is available with accessibility features such as audio ballot, touch screen, increased text size or high contrast options.

Information obtained through Government Records Access Management Act (GRAMA) requests revealed a slightly better picture, with 23 counties providing early voting dates and locations in print media and 22 pointing voters towards Election Day vote centers. Still, the numbers plummet when informing voters about same-day voter registration, how to request an accommodation or the availability of accessible voting machines.

The Way Forward:

Utah counties are already communicating with voters in many ways, the key is utilizing a spectrum of communication methods as well as ensuring the information is accurate and complete. Thankfully, updating websites and adding accessibility information is inexpensive and straightforward. The DLC is available to partner with counties as they reach out to the community. We suggest ensuring voting communication and county websites always address the following 5 questions:

1. How do I register? (Online, in person, same-day)
2. Where can I vote? (Vote center and drop box locations)
3. When can I vote? (Election dates and early voting options)
4. How can I vote? (Mail in, voting machines and accessible features)
5. Who can help? (How to request an accommodation and who to contact)

Table 1: Summary Findings of Website Review

Yes	No	Other	Criteria
25		*Incomplete: 4	Accessible using JAWS screen reader
17	12		Current information about upcoming elections, including accurate dates
14	15		List of locations where you can vote in-person
14	15		Early voting dates and locations listed
3	21	ED: 5	Same-day voter registration
1	28		Mention of voting information available in other languages
6	23		Mention that voting accommodations are available
4	25		How to request a voting accommodation or get help with an accessibility issue
3	26		Voting equipment available to voters
0	29		Mention the accessible features available with the voting equipment

*While every website was readable with a screen reader, some had elements that made information difficult or impossible to access. We felt it most accurate to list these as incomplete, rather than inaccessible

ED = Same-day voter registration (also referred to as provisional voting) was only mentioned for Election Day, with no mention of opportunity to do so during early voting

*Info represents data collected via GRAMA requests from 28 counties, excluding Morgan county who did not respond

5 counties did not have drop box locations

Methods

The DLC collected information from county websites February 11-14, 2020. Websites were evaluated to determine if they were formatted to work with *JAWS screen reader software and if they included:

- Current information about upcoming elections, including accurate dates
- List of locations where you can vote in-person
- Early voting dates and locations
- Same-day (provisional) voter registration information
- Voting information available in other languages
- Accommodations available for voters with disabilities
- How to request a voting accommodation or get help with an accessibility issue
- Voting machines or ballot marking devices available to voters
- The accessible features of voting equipment

The DLC submitted GRAMA requests in March 2020 to each county through Utah's Open Record Portal. Each county was asked to provide samples of voting communications initiated by their offices through: 1) media, 2) social media, 3) included with the ballot, 4) sent separately through the mail, or 5) any other means used to inform residents about the upcoming election. Those documents were examined to learn how counties informed voters about:

- Early voting locations and times
- Same-day voter registration
- Election Day vote center locations
- Drop box locations
- How to request accommodations
- Voting equipment availability and/or accessibility features

It should be noted that many counties were prompt in responding to our GRAMA requests, however other counties did not respond within the deadlines defined by statute, or with complete information to the extent that we had to take additional action. While we greatly appreciate the collaborative relationship we have with counties generally, we would hope, should we put together future reports, all counties would respond.

*JAWS, Job Access With Speech, is the most commonly used screen reader software for computer users whose vision loss prevents them from seeing screen content or navigating with a mouse.

San Juan County is currently the only Utah jurisdiction obligated under Section 203 of the Voting Rights Act to provide election information in a language other than English.
